WOMEN WORKERS, MIGRATION AND FAMILY IN SARAWAK

HEW Cheng Sim
Contents

List of illustrations viii
List of tables ix
Preface xi

1 Introduction 1
Women, wage work and the household 3
Rural–urban migration 7

2 A methodological discussion 11
An anthropology of women 11
A feminist anthropology 12
Feminist ethnography 15
Positionality and the politics of representation 19
Conclusion 24

3 Doing fieldwork at home 26
Research methods 27
Problems and limitations 30

4 The socio-economic context of change 34
Who are the Bidayuh? 34
Rural Bidayuh economy 36
Customary land tenure system 36
State discourse on the shifting cultivation of padi 38
Cash-cropping and the education of children 40
Bidayuh women in rural agrarian society 41
Transformation of village life 43
Rural–urban migration and urbanisation in Sarawak 43
vi Contents

5 To market, to market: rural–urban migration and becoming modern 48

- The desire to be ‘modern’ 49
- Economic necessity and migration 59
- Decision making about migration: a comparison 62
- City or country? 63
- Remittances and rural–urban relations 65
- Conclusion 67

6 Overqualified and underpaid: wage work in the personal services sector 69

- Some experiences of women in this sector of employment 73
- Women’s and men’s work in the village 76

7 Sex and salaries: single women migrants in the city 87

- Courtship and marriage in the village 90
- Bidayuh weddings – then and now 91
- Bidayuh households in the village 92
- Sexuality and young women migrants 93
- Marriage partner selection 94
- Rejection of marriage 96
- Conclusion 97

8 Marriage, money and men: working mothers and their households 98

- Paid work and life-course squeezes 98
- Working wives and their husbands: marriage in the 1990s 105
- Autonomy through wage work? 110
- Conclusion 113

9 The hand that rocks the cradle leaves wage work: Bidayuh housewives 115

- The Bidayuh housewife: a Western bourgeois family ideal or economic pragmatism? 116
- For the sake of the children’s education 117
- Domestic division of labour 123
- Management of household finances 127
- Conclusion 131

10 Holding the fort 132

- Making do, Submission, Dominated 133
- From abuse to organisational participation 138
- Conclusion 144

11 Conclusion 145

- Notes 147
- Bibliography 149
- Index 153