KUCHING: All of Universiti Malaysia Sarawak's (Unimas) security guards are in the process of being trained as auxiliary police.

Unimas vice-chancellor Prof Datuk Dr Mohd Kadim Suaidi said this during the handing over of cars and motorcycles worth RM600,000 from the board of directors to the Unimas auxiliary police yesterday.

"They help the security division to create a harmony, safe, peaceful campus. Thirty-five security guards completed their auxiliary

Thirty-five security guards completed their auxiliary police training in the Sarawak Police Training Centre on December 18 last year to improve the security system and the image of the security division.

police training in the Sarawak Police Training Centre on December 18 last year to improve the security system and the image of the security division," he said.

Kadim said the auxiliary police play an important role in crime prevention and reducing the crime rate on campus.

He added that the campus is safe and there have only been minor traffic offences and thefts reported.

To further improve security, new closed circuit television (CCTV) cameras have been installed at strategic locations on campus.

The Unimas auxiliary police unit was launched in June last year.
