Unimas has been collaborating with external parties

"Collaboration between Unimas and external parties has been going on for many years and this is to ensure that Unimas stays in touch with the needs of the stakeholders, particularly the community with regard to our curriculum and to utilise our research expertise to solve problems in the community," he said.

According to Professor Dato' Dr Mohamad Kadim, ICT plays an important role in the development of nation and economy.

Hence, there is a great potential for ICT products and services market globally.

He also revealed that the Unimas was committed to produce excellent and holistic graduates that could serve the needs of the industry, the community and the nation.

"Unimas has been actively involved in bridging the digital divide through several initiatives such as the eBario, eLamai and eBa'kelalan projects.

"These projects are done through our research centre, Institute of Social Innovation and Technologies Innovation (ISITI).

"Therefore, I believe this is another area of collaboration where we can share our expertise in terms of bridging the digital divide in the rural communities," he added.
